Gibbons Swore By God On Their First Night In Prison The gibbons seemed to get off easy.
When those gawky, little creatures are born into the world, they usually make a bad first impression. But that wasn't the case for the gibbons residing in a very special zoo in Germany.
The baby gibbons seemed to have no trouble adapting to their new surroundings, or at least that's what a spokesman for the zoo would like us to believe. Of course, what really happened is that the young gibbons had been raised in captivity, and were now ready to meet the real world. Is he going to be OK? According to the spokesman, the small creatures started acting shy and fearful when they first met the zoo's visitors, but as time went on, they started frolicking around and "dancing on the cages", although they did manage to settle down a bit. Well, if the gibbons' trip to the zoo was anything to go by, they weren't the only animals who had a rough start in life. In case you didn't know, gibbons are the "manimals" who "show their appreciation for their mother" by "swearing by god", though this time the swearing took place inside a zoo, which only makes it seem like gibbons just love to get arrested. Either way, the zoo admitted that the gibbons took their role "seriously", and even tried to start a second swearing session "in case they didn't get the message". April 4, 2012 (Source: Corvus Energy) — Now that the Carbon Tax has failed in the Senate, and the replacement plan for an increase in the fuel tax instead has passed, the best-case scenario for the oil industry in the U.S. is being put off in the proverbial “woodshed.” The gold standard for longer-term tax policies in the U

[ChattChitto RG].exe.Q: How can I pass a string to a Python subprocess.check_output() call in Mac OS X? I'm trying to use subprocess.check_output to run a clang-format on a file, but clang-format complains that it does not understand the standard input as a command-line argument. To get around this problem, I would like to pass it a string that contains the name of the file. I've tried a variety of string representations, but if I try the Unicode string "x" the Unicode string "x" with the byte string representation for Unicode, b'string' the byte string representation of the Unicode string 'b'string' the string-style byte string representation of the Unicode string 'b'string', b'string' then the call works fine. How should I format a string so that clang-format will understand it?

A: Use an actual encoded string. Python uses Unicode internally, and you can encode a string containing non-ASCII or non-UTF-8 characters and pass it to subprocess.check_output(): >>> print(u'\xe1\xbd\xc3\xb6') α
