Field of the Invention This invention generally relates to a polarization conversion apparatus and, more particularly, to a polarization conversion apparatus for converting the polarization of light that has entered from a first polarization plate toward a polarization conversion element into the same polarization as the polarization of light that has entered from a second polarization plate that is opposite to the first polarization plate. This application is based on Japanese Patent Application No. 2006-307039, the content of which is incorporated herein by reference. 2. Description of the Related Art Hitherto, the so-called vertical electric field system is known as a liquid crystal display device that includes: a single polarization plate; an LCD panel including a plurality of pixels; and a backlight including a fluorescent tube. As shown in FIG. 18, the single polarization plate polarized light from the fluorescent tube in the direction of arrow is inputted to the LCD panel from the backlight through the single polarization plate. The light that has entered the LCD panel in this way and having passed through the LCD panel is outputted to a viewer through a single polarization plate of opposite polarity. Hitherto, a double mode LCD device that combines the double mode display is proposed, and a liquid crystal driving method has been developed for the double mode LCD panel (see JP-A-2002-282943). However, the liquid crystal driving method described in JP-A-2002-282943 uses the plane of a wide area that is equivalent to the display area of a liquid crystal display panel. Therefore, the loss in the light that has entered from the backlight (black light) becomes large. On the other hand, a light guiding plate of the so 3da54e8ca3
