Restriction endonucleases, which can recognize 5'-dA-3' as the target sequence, are widely used to manipulate DNA in the research of molecular biology. EcoH2 is a methylation-independent restriction endonuclease. Its mechanism of recognition was investigated by the template activity of poly(dG-dC)2. The result showed that the template activity of poly(dG-dC)2 was maintained after methylation. The docking model showed that one hydrogen bond exists between thymine and Arg207 of EcoH2, and the phosphor atom of adenine also interacted with Arg207. The results above suggested that poly(dG-dC)2, as a template, plays a key role in the recognition of EcoH2 by hydrogen bonding.Search This Blog Wednesday, September 9, 2017 As the end of the school year nears, there are many different types of paper that students in high school may be completing.
