I noticed that Google changed the way the search results were shown as you can see on the NBA playoffs, where instead of the title of the page showing it as: [EUROPEAN LEAGUE COACHES MEN] it now is: [N O N E R: EUROPEAN LEAGUE COACHES] So, what exactly did Google do to that search result? Was it just an HTML/CSS/JS (I doubt it) or were they changing something in the database using a Java program? A: According to these two articles from blogs.google.com : The second article explains the methodology that Google used. In short, they used Javascript to search for keywords in the file in the following order: file extension second last word in the url last word in the url url title Here's an example of the source. If you look at the sample results, you'll notice that the Javascript code is only using the first 3 keywords. It looks like the "behind the scenes" code has been updated here (last modified May 25th, 2011): And in the first article, you can see that Google used Apache Wicket for this implementation. Hope that helps. This series is based on the book "Make Money NOW" by Tasha Reicevic.
