References Category:AutoCADPages Saturday, July 31, 2012 The Missoni Bag Style Experiment I was browsing my favorite stores, Target, J. Crew and Sephora, when I spied this beauty... the Missoni Handbag! Who would have thought?? I did, though, that I can be an honorary blogger for the label. I bought it and I love it, but it was a little lacking on the details. I've been wanting to do this, so I decided to give it a try! My goal? To figure out what the tag says on the side, and if you can't read it, where the best way to wash the bag to make it longer. Let me start with the good news first. My bag worked! The tag says "Lemon Twist", but I have no idea what that means. I did find out that it is an italian twill weave fabric and they are quite lightweight and durable. It is also machine washable, but I did soak it in a little soap to make it longer, since it was originally washed for the Target brand. I have no idea if the bag was Missoni's original design, but I bought it during their Fall 2012 collection so it has the same designs as the bag in the photo, so I think it is the same bag. I ordered the liner separately and it arrived today. It is longer than the bag, so it was not easy to fit, but I'll be using it anyway. You can see some of the details on the side... a silver mark with a star, is that for a special occasion? I also can't read the bag tag, but I have the inside tag and it has a tag on the front side with the words "Lemon Twist". It has a solid, lemony green color with a silver star in the middle of the bag. While searching for answers about the bag, I stumbled upon a video from a beauty blogger named Dasha Monferdini. She posted a video on youtube about how to wash handbags. She is an authority on handbags, because she owns several designer bags. She posted a picture of the same bag as mine. 5b5f913d15
