We, the Game Lab, are working on developing a new space shooter experience inspired by the old retro arcade games where you would have to move fast, be quick, and have reflexes. We've made this game to use the original Unreal Engine, and we are now fully focused on working on it. We have already made the game playable and you can check it out: play.unrealengine.com We are still adding new content to this game and we'll be announcing more information about it in upcoming months. The Game is free to play, but we also accept donations as we are a small team of only three people and we'd really appreciate any help we can get! Five modes (Batsumaru, Ninja, Droplets, Items, and Stars) plus Story Mode. Combat has become one of the most requested new features for BattlEye. Players want to be more involved in battle, while BattlEye wanted to make sure the game was playable with a gamepad. We took what we think is a great core combat system and built a larger game on top of that. Something that is usually seen in arcade mode shooters with complicated mechanics was removed. The characters are more simple and closer to a real life action game where you have a sword, a shield, and a dagger. No fancy techniques or quick time events. You'll have to approach your enemy in a different way. But we also made sure to maintain the importance of a fight, we didn't make it too easy to be able to kill your enemy in one hit, or have combat decide the game. We balanced it so that it takes time and skill to defeat your opponent, even the player will have to make decisions as to where to position themselves and how to fight. BattlEye core features: Juggle based combat (without QTEs). Random encounter of opponents (combatants do not know the location of their opponent). Multi-phase fighting sequences. Two variations of combat mechanics: Situations where you need to think about when to attack and when to defend. Blind attacks without a miss or hit confirmation. Easy introduction of player 2. Point and click interface. Character animation based on a real life action system, not a 3D fighting style. Physics based on real life action. Juggle/Dodge. Shield, sword and dagger. Magic sword (uses movement commands to move forward, but attacks with magical power). Evasion. No camera shake. Several weapons with their own attacks (kata, arc, range, shield, dagger, skill). Stealth maps. No pathfinding. No maps or save points. We created custom fight systems for every match in order to increase the playability and the difficulty. Each mode has its own characteristics: Batsumaru - three phases: phase 1 begins with a weak attack and a dodge. In phase 2, the two combatants will exchange attacks and move around the arena, and in phase 3, attacks intensify. - Batsumaru Lasers - 5 phases: a projectile will appear in the middle of the arena. In

is a Japanese manga series written by Misaki Tenkawa and illustrated by Manabu Kuma. It has been serialized in Dengeki G's Magazine since November 1, 2008 and was later collected in two tankōbon released. The character designs are by Minami Hotoboggu and it is published by Media Factory. As of 2015, it had received mixed reviews. Anime News Network gave it a favorable review for its art style but criticized the characters and the plot, feeling that it would appeal more to preteens and teenagers than adults. Mania Entertainment ranked it 8.5 out of 10, saying that it will appeal to fans of the Groundhog Day organization. In Japan, it was featured in issue 25 of the Dengeki G's Comic Book, the 40th volume of Silver Wing's Silver Wing Action, and in the 20th volume of Pocket Monster. Additionally, the chapter "Yasuiro" was later compiled in Pocket Monsters Growl. Plot In Batsumaru, the earth is polluted to the extent that everyone's has the ability to fly. However, they find it hard to fly because they can't harness their powers. Taking advantage of the situation, Touya, a boy, decides to take a plane to China to gain normalcy and hopefully find his sister, whom he has not seen in seventeen years. There are also high risks and challenges hidden among the dirty land and flying.

Characters Main characters Voiced by: Kentaro Ito The main protagonist, a boy who makes a living by flying a plane around Japan. Despite being very naive, he is shown to be hardworking when it comes to a mission. He tends to panic easily but quickly recovers. He is mostly unused to living this kind of life, which can be seen by his indecisive and naïve actions. During his mission in China, he meets Maya. While he has the ability to fly on his own, he is always pushed by Touya and Touma, which he also dislikes very much. He is unaware of a lot of things, which can be seen by his unwillingness to leave the grounds without Cheery, who insists he does not have to follow him around. He can sometimes misunderstand things. A boy that serves as a caretaker to Touya since his childhood. His ability to become quadrupedal enables Touya to take advantage of instinctive movements he gets only as human. He has the ability to
