Every year, millions of children born into the poorest families are moved by their own survival to seek out an education -- and they're succeeding. One-third of all school-age children in developing countries no longer drop out, and the number of girls attending school in developing nations has jumped from 6.2 million in 2000 to 7.5 million in 2015.

They're also learning. Whereas in 1995 no child in sub-Saharan Africa could read, in 2012 more than half could. So why isn't more of this happening in the United States? As of 2015, the United States spent more than $800 billion per year on schools, which put Americans at No. 1 in per-pupil spending, ahead of every other nation in the developed world.

Nevertheless, only 60.9 percent of U.S. fourth-graders can read at an acceptable level, and the recent expansion of the nation's K-12 school system has done little to fix our educational system. Even leaving aside the fact that we spend so much, we're not educating children as well as we could be. About 90 percent of the world's kids attend school, and many seem to enjoy it. The United States' score on standardized tests of basic reading and math is consistently among the lowest in the b7e8fdf5c8

* Record video or photos without Windows OneDrive * No need to install anything * Record video or photos as JPEG or MOV * No need to install anything * Fastest and less-resource intensive app * Works great Lenovo ThinkPad T440s (2020) is a 2016/2017. So it has Intel i5-7200U 2.3GHz with 8GB ddr3 memory and 500GB harddrive. Intel i3 Processor with 4GB ddr3 memory and 320 GB hard drive. Which is best vendor if one is willing to spend that much. The best GPU is the Nvidia GeForce GTX 1050Ti, Quadro P1000, 1 TB 5400 rpm hard drive, 32 GB ddr4 memory The best CPU is the Intel Core i5-8250U 2.40GHz with 8GB ddr3 memory Which would be enough to play a 1080p movie, however the Internet would not be able to keep up with the performance. Then I would get the Intel Core i7-8400 2.70GHz with 16 GB ddr4 memory Still one would be able to play a 1080p movie, but not with native and very fast performance. I have not tested any of the other. I like to have an SSD with at least 256GB. I have an SATA drive. I have a couple of laptops that do not have a builtin webcam. I want to know what laptop they were. the Intel Core i3-7350U with 4GB ddr3 memory and NVidia GeForce 940MX The Intel Core i3-7350U with 8GB ddr4 memory and GeForce GTX 1050Ti I want an SSD so that it will boot quickly and efficiently. I also want to know about the OS and the RAM. I'm currently using Windows 10 Home Edition installed on a PC with a Core i3 Processor 2.5 GHz and 8 GB RAM. I was thinking of upgrading to Windows 10 Home Edition Pro version or Windows 10 Home version (because I'm not sure if I can upgrade to Windows 10 Home version from Windows 8.1 Home (which I have already installed). I'm thinking of buying a new laptop and want to know what laptop would be the best if I were to upgrade my PC to Windows 10 Pro? Currently, I'm planning
