That quick ferry in to the Taj Mahal is an incredible reflection of how relaxed and friendly Bollywood is, and how the £23 ticket for the 20-minute ferry ride is only worth it for the must-do experience. To get there, you must go to the Gateway of India, a monument that was built by the British in the 19th century to welcome Indian visitors (and to warn away those who might want to keep plundering British rule). Walk along the Thames River, admire the stately buildings, make a wish on the Taj Mahal and then hop on the ferry. The boat takes 20 minutes to dock in the heart of the Red Fort, a beautiful monument that was once the residence of the Mughal emperors (it became India's Parliament from 1859 to 1877) and still serves as a royal palace today. The ferry still arrives under its former name - the King George V Dock, named after the Mughal emperor who was on the throne when the dock was built. Inside the dock, there is the Chowpatty Beach, where you can see the fishing boats bobbing in the sea and the beautiful Parsi Garden, with a replica of the Taj Mahal.
