I have to use this callback in every element of an array of result objects. Currently, I'm just calling the function and passing the callback as an argument, like this: for (var i = 0; i { result.data.forEach(element => { .... do stuff }) }) } But I'd like to change it so I can wait until all of the result objects have been resolved before calling the callback. I've looked into Promise.all, and the docs look pretty straightforward, but I'm not sure how to go about wrapping all of those axios.get in something like Promise.all, even though they all resolve before I get the callback to the original function. EDIT: just to be clear, I'm using Google's CORS options. I do all my API calls through HTTPS, so my domain and origins look like this:
