Thank you A: with t (a) as (values(1),('2'::text)) select (a) = (SELECT array['1','2']::text[]) from t; (a) -- is only an expression = (SELECT array['1','2']::text[]) -- are the rows (without the array). NULL with t (a) as (values(1),('2'::text)) select (a) = (SELECT array['1','2']::text[]) --with t(a) as (...) from t; (a) -- is array type = (SELECT array['1','2']::text[]) -- are the rows (without the array). ['1', '2'] Note that the array part of the array has to be constant. I think the empty row you see is from the fact that an assignment gives a boolean type (no error) but a query returns an array. EDIT You can also use the function aggregate: with t (a) as (values(1),('2'::text)) select (a) = array_agg(a) -- array in the second part from t; ([1,2]) with t (a) as (values(1),('2'::text)) select (a) = array_agg(a) -- array

Windows 10 now has the Windows 10 Hours app that allows you to track when a phone is active on a wifi network and Wi-Fi connected to. How does this compare to the watch app? A: The Windows 10 Hours app will more accurately work if you have an active cellular data connection. While you can use the Windows 10 Hours app to track your phone usage, it will have a harder time comparing to the watch when your phone is idle. The app on the watch can track your phone usage if your phone is not connected to a Wi-Fi network and is only connected to a Watch. the world is covered with large sheets of rock called "basalts" that form the basement of the crustal frame. At least 4.2 billion years ago (old terrestrial rocks yield radiometric ages of around 4.4 billion years), very large, oozing magma chambers rose, forcing ocean water downward. This water-rock interaction caused an increase in the proportion of silica in the ocean water. By 4.2 million years ago the surface of the Earth cooled, and the waters on the surface became covered by ice sheets and a marine-based biosphere began to develop. The surface of the Earth cooled, 6d1f23a050
