3 Replies Jen There is nothing wrong with your punctuations. I would suggest using hyphens to make your sentences read better. And I would try again to turn off that switch on your keyboard. I want you to send me an email telling me what you think you should try to get rid of your diabetes, because I can't seem to pinpoint what is going on. I really, really want to help you. I want to, as much as I can. I know how hard this is for you, and I'm sure others have been through worse than you. I try my best to help. I really wish I could, but I can't seem to get rid of my diabetes. :( I haven't told you anything about my diabetes, just that you haven't had any seizures. There have been no seizures in my life. My dad is diabetic, but he has never had a seizure like yours. He had problems with the back of his eyes going blind, but that's from his diabetes, not his brain or anything. I've got type 2, but mine is always changing. It's fluctuating all the time. I took over a year off of my medication before I tried Insanity or P90x. The Insanity DVD doesn't work for me, because it makes me tired and nauseated. I've only worked out 3 times, for a total of 7 hours (30 minutes each), and I stopped in the middle of P90X (18 of the 21 days) cause I knew something else would start to happen. I really do want to help, but I haven't got a clue as to what's going on. Do you have any family history of diabetes or seizure disorder? I'm not pregnant, I don't breast feed, I don't do steroids, I don't smoke or drink. I feel okay now, but I didn't feel okay in any way on Monday, the day before, the day of the seizure, or the day after. I was taking my last medication, but I still felt fine. I don't think my neuropathy was going to cause a problem this time, I think it was something else. If you're fine now, I'm going to tell my PCP about it. Since I'm not pregnant, and I don't breastfeed, and I don't do steroids, and I don't smoke
