step 1: Confirm the manufacturer and model of your device and the product revision. You will need to update the CSC in the next step. To download this file to your tablet, simply do the following: NINJA V (the NINJA V uses the same firmware file as the SE V). step 2: If the firmware file is not updated in the ESCORT M1 folder on your tablet, connect the tablet to your computer and load the ESCORT M1 folder using the "open" command. step 3: Change the CSC of your device. Settings -> Device -> CSC. Note: This is a one-time operation. The CSC cannot be changed later on. The CSC is required for the firmware upgrade. If you forget, you will not be able to update the firmware. step 4: Upload the updated firmware (FW96658A.bin) to the ESCORT M1 folder on your tablet. step 5: Disconnect your tablet from the computer. Power on the tablet and wait for it to boot. From now on, take note of a unique four-digit number appearing in the device's status screen. During the download, a new firmware file may be downloaded to the device, which may be approximated to the following format: 00 NNNN. An example of this would be 0000859 where 859 is the correct four-digit number. After downloading the firmware file is flashed to the device by Loke. This new firmware file replaces the old one. To install a custom ROM on the tablet, we need an installation package (what you previously download using Odin) and an unlocked bootloader. For this, you need to root your Samsung Galaxy Tab and unlock the bootloader.

To connect your VideoMic NTG to a Lightning-equipped iOS devices, such as an iPhone, iPad or iPod, you need to use the RDE SC15 cable (300mm long) or SC19 cable (1.5m long). Use this to connect the USB-C output of the microphone to the input of your device (please ensure you've updated your VideoMic NTG to the latest firmware to allow for this connection you can download this here). You can also plug your VideoMic NTG into an iOS device using the 3.5mm output, however, using the USB-C output with the SC15 gives you access to a host of features including headphone monitoring, the safety channel, and two-way audio transmission for making video calls. We highly recommend this option.
