the lunchbox is one of those beautifully touching movies that tells a story you didn't know you desperately needed until you've seen it. in the movie, a woman named Ila tries to rekindle the spark in her marriage by preparing a special lunch for her (not-so-great) husband. the plan goes awry, however, and the lunch ends up in front of an antisocial widower instead. when her husband doesn't mention his special meal, Ila adds a note to the next lunch she prepares (which also goes to said widower) and an unlikely friendship is born. with Amazon's ever-growing selection of products and services, Amazon Prime's free two-day shipping, and hundreds of thousands of movies and TV episodes, it's no wonder that Amazon is the world's largest online shopping website. Gangs of Wasseypur is one of the most ambitious and brilliantly executed Bollywood movies of recent memory. It's a love letter to the gritty Indian cities of yesteryear, where poverty and crime ruled, where the honest cop was a rare breed, and where a man could find himself lost in a world he didn't understand and didn't want to be a part of. The result is a movie that's as much a documentary as it is a love letter to this beautiful country, and one of the very best Indian movies you'll see all year.
