it is not always practical to create a physical background for light simulations or even to have a physical background in the first place. so in those cases, the su podium hdr image-based lighting option can be used instead of a physical sky. this option is a great opportunity for the creative user to do advanced lighting techniques like light reflections and refractions. it also allows you to use a combination of elements in the scene to create a more realistic image. this new version has been carefully designed and tested to be the most stable, fast and easy-to-use version of su podium. in fact, it is so easy to use that in most cases a new podium user will be able to learn the program in a matter of minutes. su podium has some great new features and lots of new cool ways to use podium to create a wide range of different images. previous versions used a very efficient ruby code to export sketchup geometry, textures, camera and sun position to podium's raytracing engine. however, the c++ podium exporter can export geometry and materials to the raytracing engine much faster. in many cases 10 times faster. in fact, v2.5.1 is 50% faster than v2. as you know, with large models, processing and parsing scenes can often be the longest stage in the entire rendering process. so for large models, the speed difference can be several minutes or more in rendering time. panoramic vr has been introduced with su podium v2.5.x su podium includes an option to create equirectangular images and convert these into spherical panoramic vrs where the camera is inside the sphere and can be rotate on it's axis in 360 degrees by your clients. creates a powerful presentation. please read about panoramic vr here.
