In the last couple years, small, simple interventions have been shown to improve vaccination rates. A key component of effective intervention is to not overlook the 'uninformed.' There are large numbers of patients who are not receiving the influenza vaccine because they think that they do not need it. By considering this important segment of the population, flu vaccination rates can be increased dramatically. In Colorado, where the influenza vaccine is recommended for all residents, a simple intervention was used by The DENIM Center. All adults who came to the clinic for other reasons were offered influenza vaccinations. They included diabetic patients, heart patients, and the elderly. The intervention was quite simple. All of the adult patients who were not receiving the influenza vaccine were offered a Pop-up Influenza Vaccination Table. The intervention was seen as a way to bring a simple intervention directly to the patient.Bright new chapter in the history of the Hindu faith. A new translation of the Ramayana is being spearheaded by RK Datta, founder of the Sanatan Dharma Maha Sabha. But while he believes he can restore to the majority of Hindus a work written by an illiterate in the 7th century, his words are met with scepticism
