It's been a busy year for Trafalgar Pie Co., a small business that has been baking in the area for over three decades. "We finally had a good season in 2017," said Katrina Wallace, who works as the restaurant's manager. "We don't have sales like we did in 2016, but we are consistently sold out." Wallace said the store's total sales for 2017 were almost $50,000. After a move out of its downtown location at the beginning of the decade, the business has had to find a new home to expand its business. "The difference is we moved from a parking lot to a parking lot," said Wallace. "In our old location, we didn't have an actual storefront. We were always across the road from the old car dealership." As the owner of the business that also runs a large catering company, Wallace said the real estate issue brought challenges that made it difficult to grow the business. "I had to cut my salary," said Wallace. "I have to make sure I can pay my bills and make sure I can keep my employees." Wallace said the new location is close to two grocery stores, has lots of parking, and is within walking distance of Hastings College. That move has made it easier for business to grow. "We did almost $20,000 in sales at the new location," said Wallace. "We are doing really well, but we need to keep the increase in sales." Wallace said she loves what she does and wants to keep people coming back to the store. "My staff does a great job," said Wallace. "They are pretty friendly and easy-going." Wallace said the restaurant only employs a limited amount of staff at any given time. The store will be open Tuesday through Friday. In the summertime
