Update v3: I added more features to this post as well as some additional features in the comments as well as after a few days. I have updated this post with the current version and new features. Andor Mészáros, a Hungarian programmer [1], founder of the Hungarian programming association [2] that I volunteer in, shared on the forums that he saw a successful team leader and a failed team leader in his career. In the successful one he used John Wolever's speech to motivate his team to learn programming [3], and in the unsuccessful one it was a person (let's call him John) who often did not talk to his colleagues. In time John realized that the software developer community is much bigger than the programming community. That's how he started to organize Meetups in Toronto. He has also gotten recognized for that from Steve Bauman [4], who unfortunately is not a regular poster on the web [5] but has been involved with the Meetups since they started and worked at the Toronto Java Developers Meetups . Steve said in a Twitter post : John Wolever shared this significant recommendation regarding a successful team leader - this contact was made during a meeting on programming-related topics, with a group of all-too-junior software developers. Lightroom is an excellent photo manager, but Adobe has a hard time believing that once you step into Photoshop, all the work you have done in Lightroom will have to be recreated in Photoshop, or, at least, some of the work. I suppose that makes sense. I might say more, but it's a little too early to summarize. Let's just say, that Lightroom is definitely going to get a much-needed update later this year. Nevertheless, the update should bring much-needed new features and performance enhancements to Lightroom to make the program faster and easier to use - the number one complaint that I get from photographers nowadays. And there is a lot to be said about the Lightroom 6 training included in the update. I imagine the interaction with all the new features will be a first for Lightroom users, but it is surely a great way to learn. HTML5 on the other hand is not a good idea, but I am sure that Adobe's mind about that misfit is not as locked in as my mind is.
